SUMMER MISSION APPEAL

MAKE DISCIPLES OF ALL NATIONS

© J. S. Paluch Co., Inc.

Next weekend, August 22-23, Sister Joanne Vander Heyden, a Franciscan Sister of the Sacred Heart whose Motherhouse is in Frankfort, IL., will be here at all the Masses to speak to you about the missionary works of her community. The Franciscan Sisters are a Catholic women's religious congregation with a 130-year history in the United States doing works of neighborly love. They co-sponsor hospitals, long-term care facilities, and serve in several schools and parishes in Illinois, Indiana and California. Since 1964 they have ministered in Brazil at Icoaraci and Barcarena, near the mouth of the Amazon River, and most recently have opened another mission at Curucamba. The Sisters form small base communities to teach and spread our Catholic faith. They accompany and assist the people who live in some the most impoverished regions of Brazil. Your generosity will help to support and further this important work among the poorest of the poor.

MASS MOVEMENT – AUGUST 17 THRU 29

No, this isn't a call to organize a demonstration for some worthy cause, but an announcement about the movement of the 8:30a.m. morning mass to Kane Hall during the next two weeks while the re-flooring of the sanctuary takes place. During that time, the 6:30a.m. communion service will be cancelled. Beginning Monday, August 31st, both will return to the church. Saturday 4:00p.m. and Sunday masses will remain in the church. Funerals that need to be celebrated during these two weeks will take place at St. Bernadette (with one of our priests presiding) unless the family wishes to contact another parish.

If you are a Lector or Eucharistic Minister and have any difficulty getting up and down stairs, you might want to get a substitute for the weekend of August 22-23, since there will be a number of uneven surfaces to cross in the sanctuary while the work is in progress.

And more mass movement....We had planned to begin the morning mass switch to 8:15a.m. on September 1st to make it easy to remember; but it's probably best to have that move coincide with the return from Kane Hall to church on August 31st. So remember: the new weekday morning mass time will be 8:15a.m. throughout the year, beginning Monday, August 31st. If you missed my announcement of this several months ago, the reason is simple: it's for the benefit of our school children and teachers whose day begins at 7:50a.m. All our school children from K thru 8 attend mass once a week, but the 8:30a.m. mass time created an odd first period—too long for homeroom and too short to start another class and still get to mass. An 8:15a.m. mass will allow our students and teachers to have more quality time in class while still giving them the spiritual boost of attending mass each week. Our hope is that this earlier time won't inconvenience anyone; it might even help those who want to attend mass but have to rush or leave early to get to work.

If anyone will need the chair lift to get down to Kane Hall for these two weeks, please let me know sometime this week so each of the priests can have the key available for you. I trust that this brief inconvenience will be worth it once all the work is completed.

GOOD NEWS!

We can finally say with confidence that Fr. Arthur WILL be staying here at St. John Fisher. He will remain as a resident priest rather than a part-time associate, while he assumes full-time responsibilities at the Marriage Tribunal. However, most of you won't notice too much of a change, since he will still be celebrating weekday and weekend masses as he has for the past four years. The only difference is that he will be less likely to attend other parish functions, though I'm sure he will be present here as much as his full-time job at the Tribunal allows.

I'm very happy that things worked out this way for us; but more importantly, we should hope that Fr. Arthur will be happy with his more demanding job at the Pastoral Center. I know he will appreciate all of us keeping him in our prayers.

THE PLACE OF MUSIC IN OUR WORSHIP: PART TWO

As we prepare for the completion (sometime next month) of our enlarged choir and music space, it's good to continue a reflection on liturgical music, with the focus this week on those who make the music. The U.S. Bishops' document, Music in Catholic Worship, says this about the musical part played by each of us in the liturgy:

"In liturgical celebrations each one, minister or layperson, who has an office to perform, should do all of, but only, those parts which pertain to that office by the nature of the rite and the principles of the liturgy. Special musical concern must be given to the role of the congregation, the cantor, the choir and the instrumentalists."

If we boil all that down to everyday language, it simply means that we all have a part to play, no one should steal anyone else's part, and in the end, we're all in this together.

Some of us grew up in a church that might be called "musically imbalanced." By that I mean that, unless we sang in a choir, there wasn't much for us to do musically as a "congregation." When I was a kid, I remember enjoying Benediction, Holy Hours or novenas as much as mass primarily because we got to sing. I may not have known what I was singing—usually in Latin—but I felt so much more a part of the whole experience. After Vatican II, I remember how excited I was the first time I was at a mass that began with an "Entrance Song" that we all could sing together. Unfortunately in those days, I was basically tone-deaf, so I don't know how much anyone around me enjoyed the experience.

In the decades since Vatican II, the place of music in worship has continued to evolve to the understanding expressed in the above quote, namely, that we all have a part to play but no one does it all. We're fortunate to have three wonderful choirs—the Adult Choir, the Ensemble and the Children's Choir—along with a group of talented and dedicated instrumentalists. But they are not there to entertain us. Sometimes, of course, there will be a choir piece before mass or after communion or the instrumentalists will provide an intro to a piece of music. But most of the time, the choir is there to support us in our musical worship, and it's our responsibility to join in, as best we can, even if we might think we're tone-deaf. The Cantor or Leader of Song has a role similar to the choir's, primarily during the hymns and acclamations. But at other times, particularly during the responsorial psalm, the gospel acclamation and some versions of the Glory to God, we take on an "antiphonal" relationship with the Cantor, an alternating form of song: the Cantor sings the verse and we sing only the refrain. No one else should usurp the Cantor's part at those times—not the priest, the deacon or anyone else in the assembly—no matter how much we might like to sing. The priest also has a musical role, particularly in introducing the acclamations and in chanting the Preface to the Eucharistic Prayer.

"Music is of preeminent importance....an integral part of the solemn liturgy." That should be a powerful challenge for every Catholic Christian to do our musical part, in every liturgy, to give praise and thanks to our loving God.

A FEW THOUGHTS FROM OUR KENTUCKY MISSION TRIP....

IT'S OUR WAY OF SAYING THANKS...WE COULDN'T HAVE DONE IT WITHOUT YOU!

Meghan "Jigsaw" Doran

"This trip made me realize that doing some small projects could be a giant part of another person's life. With my own two hands, I can change the world by sharing my gifts and helping make other people lives better. Not only did we change the lives of other people, but our lives were changed by the people around us. While building houses that will last a lifetime, we are also building friendships that will last forever. Doing service in Kentucky means so much because when you return home you appreciate what you have so much more, and you learn what is really necessary to live."

Mary Carole Scannell

"This week was an amazing experience. This trip to me was more than fixing a roof and siding a house. I created friendships, grew as a person, and found God in unlikely places. Through this trip, I learned even the smallest gestures can change people world. When I took a break during the day to meet the family we were helping I realized that being here meant more to them than I really understood. Local people in the town were very grateful for what we were doing but didn't understand why. As Kim said, "If God wanted you here you came here this week." I felt I was supposed to be on this trip and had an indescribable time."

Deacon Larry Antonsen (Adult Chaperone)

"As a first timer and as the 'grandpa' of this group, because I'm old enough to be, I've been blown away this week. I actually went on my first teenage retreat almost 30 years ago, and every time I've been involved with young people, I see the power and beauty of God! And it was like that this week! I've seen people come together with love. When I looked at the work we did and saw the tears in Tabitha's eyes as we were leaving, I knew that we had been doing God's work all week. So thank you to all my 'grandchildren' for bringing God alive in my heart and for helping me stay young!"
